

Position Overview

The Department of Management Sciences is seeking qualified and dedicated individuals to join as Lecturers with specializations in Human Resource Management and Project Management. The selected candidates will contribute to teaching, student mentoring, curriculum development, and departmental academic activities while supporting the university's accreditation and quality assurance requirements.

Key Responsibilities

- Deliver undergraduate and/or postgraduate courses in the relevant specialization area.
- Prepare course outlines, lesson plans, teaching materials, and assessments in line with the approved scheme of studies.
- Guide and mentor students on academic and professional development.
- Contribute to curriculum revision, course updates, and program review in alignment with HEC and NBEAC standards.
- Assist in accreditation-related documentation and quality assurance activities; prior experience in NBEAC-related processes will be considered a strong plus.
- Engage in scholarly activities, research, and publications where applicable.
- Participate in departmental meetings, committees, and faculty development programs.
- Collaborate with colleagues to support cross-disciplinary teaching needs.

Qualifications & Requirements

- Minimum: MS/MPhil in Management Sciences (from an HEC-recognized university).
- Specialization in one of the following:
 - Human Resource Management
 - Project Management
- Teaching experience at the university level will be preferred.
- Experience in curriculum review, course revisions, and academic documentation is desirable.
- Strong communication and presentation skills.
- Ability to engage students effectively and contribute to academic excellence.

Additional Information

- Selected candidates will be expected to contribute to both departmental courses and interdepartmental teaching requirements.
- Faculty members will also play a role in supporting accreditation processes and other quality assurance standards.